

THE IDES OF MARCH 2010

By Jeff Steinberg

Sotto voce, within the corridors of power in Washington, D.C. and around the country, political insiders, including top Democratic Party officials, are voicing the same conclusion: Barack Obama is a disaster, and if nothing is done, the United States is not going to survive. Some, among the muted chorus, are openly talking of the need for the President to be removed from office—by impeachment or resignation. Others fear the “i” word, but offer no comforting alternative to President Obama’s speedy removal from office.

The first open fissures within the Obama White House team, itself, have now grabbed headlines, beginning with a Daily Beast online column two weeks ago by Leslie Gelb, the former President of the New York Council on Foreign Relations, longtime New York Times senior correspondent, and Carter Administration State Department policy director. Clearly speaking for the Democratic Party wing of the Eastern Liberal Establishment, Gelb demanded the immediate ouster of Rahm Emanuel, and the entire Chicago sycophant crew occupying the remaining West Wing offices.

Gelb’s column was countered, a week later, by the Washington Post columnist Dana Milbank, who jumped to Emanuel’s defense, while roasting Valerie Jarrett, David Axelrod, Robert Gibbs and, by implication, First Lady Michelle Obama. By Milbank’s account, Emanuel’s ruthless competence has been undermined, at every turn, by the Chicago incompetents, who treat President Obama like a cult god—a most dangerous relationship to cultivate with a man with a Narcissistic Complex to rival Emperor Nero. Emanuel would sell his soul to the Devil with no compunctions. But he demands Devilish competence.

There is good reason to believe that the Milbank account is accurate, and that Rahm Emanuel is not about to throw his reputation down the nearest toilet bowl, to remain in competition with the likes of Jarrett and Axelrod. Things are about to get very nasty in Obamaland, and none too soon.

The reality is that the American people have already delivered a devastating vote of no-confidence to President Obama at every opportunity, since the August recess town hall meeting explosions. This past week, students at the University of California at Berkley rioted over cuts of $2.5 billion in the bankrupt state’s higher education budget. Young Americans, who delivered the 2008 election to Obama, have defected in droves, and are facing a no-future prospect with anger, that is now boiling over into rage. If you thought that the Spring 1968 Boomer generation campus explosions were serious business, wait to see what erupts this month—as students are hit with massive cutbacks, cancelled credit lines, and real unemployment and underemployment figures between 20-30 percent.

One very senior Democratic Party official openly declares that Obama has done more to destroy the United States in one year than Bush and Cheney were able to do in eight. Can there be a more stinging indictment?

So far, the pandemonium in the corridors of power is taking place in cloak rooms, and private watering holes, in whispered tones. Out on the street the same sentiments are being voiced with pungency and force.

To date, Lyndon LaRouche is the only public figure to openly and loudly demand Obama’s impeachment or resignation. An orderly transfer of power, as specified in our Federal Constitution, must take place. The groundswell is building, and the message could not be more clear: The Ides of March 2010 are days away.

THE OBAMA ADMINISTRATION IS DOOMED

Lyndon LaRouche said the following during a meeting with associates on Wednesday, February 24.

Some of us are thinking, that the expectancy is that the current President of the United States, is not going to be the current President of the United States much longer. There are many signs of this. It's not the kind of thing you can calculate mathematically, but you see a conjecture of various events coming together, and you say, "something is going to snap." And what is in the process of crumbling, is the integrity of the Office of the President, right now. The signs are all there. The date has not been given, but the signs are all there, that he is not much longer for this Presidency. Because, if he were to continue as President, the United States would not exist much longer. And if the United States would not exist much longer, the world as we have known it, would not exist much longer. Things can not continue as they are. And more and more people of relevant positions, are sensing that that is the situation now. One bet is two weeks, another bet is three weeks.

Because it's not possible, for the United States to continue to function, with this character as President.

The typification of that, is the case of what's going on in Haiti. The solution for Haiti, as we have assessed it, from various consulting sources, each with their own views, and each with their understanding of the problem is this: First of all, as long as Obama is President, there is no hope for Haiti. So either Haiti survives, or Obama does not survive, one of the two.

Now, for Haiti to survive requires, first of all, the activation of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and up to this point, the President of the United States is not going to allow the Corps of Engineers to take control of Haiti. What has to be done is not, essentially, a large evacuation from the territory of Haiti, but an evacuation of people to areas where the flooding is not going to be severe, which would be a catastrophe now, given where people are now. And you get a situation in which, they get to a little higher ground, and quickly proceed, under the Corps of Engineers, with supplementary forces under the direction of the Corps of Engineers. That is, the scientific part of the job will be done by the Corps of Engineers in the usual way if you had an actual President, the way it would be done. Then we're going to have to have a number of people employed, who are skilled craftsmen, probably as private contractors or special government contractors, in their capacity, who will supervise the actual constructions that have to occur on a slightly higher level than the lower plain on which the city is situated.

In other words, we've got to get people away from the cesspools, or the from the cess deposits. We've got to get them to a somewhat safer area, above the lower plain in which the great disaster occurred around the city. We've got to build housing, emergency housing, which can be done under the direction of the Corps of Engineers, with the help of labor which is brought in as qualified labor—as construction labor. And then, we've got to take a lot of younger people to assist, from the United States, to work in this area, and assist in providing and organizing the housing and the facilities, on which the population in jeopardy is going to be moved, at a slightly higher ground or higher level of plain, than is represented by the lower plain in which the city is located.

That can be done within a three- to four-week period. But it can be done, only under a Corps of Engineers operation as a U.S.-government-sponsored operation, and with the hiring of people who are skilled people, with crafts and so forth, who are going to come in and do the work under the direction of the Corps of Engineers cadre, and with the help of some young people who are now unemployed in the United States, who will be taken into Haiti, to do the construction, and then, with a certain section, of about 300,000 or more of the population of that region, brought into that safer area, where there will be some kind of toilet facilities, otherwise there is the disease threat. And that has to happen.

Now, let's take another situation, which is an example of the same thing. Let's look at Brazil: That hellhole called Brazil. It's the center of cannibalism, south of the Caribbean—but a special kind cannibalism. It's a parasite area, of Botín and company. It's a British operation, which we've documented in some of our productions on the LaRouchePAC site. It's a doomed area, a self-doomed area, and it's being used by the British Empire, in a very significant way. It's being used as the inflation center of the world, in terms of this Inter-Alpha Group. The Inter-Alpha Group is the British Empire, it's the core of the British Empire. And this thing is headed toward a runaway carry-trade hyperinflation, short term.

When you're doing forecasting of the type I'm presenting now, you take these things into consideration, you don't take some kind of a mathematical formula, to say, "On this date, according to this mathematical formula, the collapse is going to occur." You look at a concatenation of circumstances, which all add up to an interlocking set of events. And you see, that all these interlocking set of events are converging on a certain asymptote. So you don't know exactly what date, what calculated date the convergence is going to have occurred, but you know you're getting into that vicinity. Because what happens, you go into a negative operation, at a certain point. You have a group of events, which are all disastrous, but the society is still functioning. These events are converging upon one another. And whenever they converge, the system goes down.

If you read all the signs, take Haiti—which is actually a national crisis for the United States; you look at the fraud, which is called "Brazil". You find, the Presidency of the United States is useless for everybody. No one benefits from the continued existence of the currency Presidency of the United States. So, if the world is going to get less un-bad, suddenly, it's going to mean replacing something inside the government of the United States, such as the President.

You're getting to a concatenation of circumstances which are converging on a point of breakdown. In the month of March, the Ides of March another Caesar, a new Nero goes down. So, that's what the Ides of March are telling us. That's what the soothsayers are saying.

So we have to think about what is going to replace the Obama Administration—not as a candidate replacement, but a convulsion, in which Obama is no longer the same place he is now. And you're going to find a break-out, among people who compose the Obama Administration, because they have no cohesion any more. Because of the convergence of events, real events, real history—not betting on a horse race, but real history, is going to intervene—and is intervening! So that we're looking at the IDES OF MARCH! The soothsayers are running all over the sidewalks, hither and there, and elsewhere, soothsayers under your feet, everywhere! They can't get away from the soothsayers, everywhere!

The President of the United States' administration is doomed.
