

THE IDES OF MARCH 2010

LAROUCHEPAC MARCH 13TH INTERNATIONAL WEBCAST

We're now on the verge of the, not the loss, but the replacement of an incumbent President. Some people are talking about "2012." "2012" is codeword for "2010." And 2010 does not mean December. Because the pace of developments is such, today, that it's doubtful that this President will be still President, in April. These kinds of things are not precisely predictable. What is forecastable and what is predictable are two different things. You can forecast a crisis; you can forecast the approximate timing of a crisis, but you can not forecast precisely the reaction to the crisis, or the way it will come about. What you can forecast, and forecast precisely, as I have done many times. But I warn people, you can not forecast a date, a given, fixed date for anything. Because human beings aren't like that. Human society is not like that. There's always the element of the unexpected, but the unexpected event, will be absorbed, within the expected crisis. That is, you can try to change the date of the battle, but you may not be able to change the date of the losing of a war. So, we can not predict the date that certain things will happen, as date certain, but we can predict that we're in a very narrow area, in which this President's candidacy and Presidency is doomed! Nothing will save this Presidency, in this present form: And the sooner he's gone, the better. Every day of delay of his departure, is a catastrophe in itself. The mere fact that he's still President on any given day, is a catastrophe, which will mean catastrophes that people will suffer.

Richard Nixon went the other way. He was the other way, already! Hmm? And one day, when he thought that he was going to resist impeachment -- he never was impeached. Wonderful! And that's a lesson for today: We're not going to eliminate Obama from the Presidency by impeachment. He's going to walk away from it, or be carried screaming, away from it, hmm?

What happened? Well, Nixon got the word, that the Senate vote was ready, there was a Senate vote to impeach him. He got the word from his advisors, and took this unpleasant news, not happily, but thought maybe his neck required him to take that into consideration. So, he volunteered to walk away. And now, we face a point, we've come to a point, where we have a President who's the worst President in American history, the most despised President in all American history, most despised by the people of the United States, except for the non-people who like him. And he's going to walk away, because if he does not, if he's allowed to retain the powers of the Presidency, even in residual form, he will bring about the destruction of the United States. We're now at a crucial point in our history, where that destruction is pending: Every day, he's in office, is a tragedy for our United States. And for its people, who are in worsening conditions of life, as each day passes. For whom there's no remedy -- there's fear, there's anger, there's rage. There's no hope of the future.

In the meantime, centered on Brazil, there's a looming danger of an explosion of the Brazil currency. That explosion, which is now pending, would mean, a general breakdown crisis, for the entire planet.

The power of the British system, lies in this Nixon thing. What happened? At the point, in August of 1971, that Nixon moved, under, of course, puppet strings which moved him, to sink the fixed-exchange-rate system agreement, which was a residue of Roosevelt's policy, the United States was going to Hell. At that point, the British organized a financial cabal, centered around a figure called Lord Jacob Rothschild. This cabal is called "the Inter-Alpha Group." Now, the Inter-Alpha Group, today, which is based largely on speculation among Spanish people you wouldn't like to know, into Brazil, around the Banco Santander, but the Inter-Alpha Group as a whole, is the greatest swindle on this planet. And the British economy, entirely, financially, depends upon this swindle, whose base of operations is now, principally in Brazil.

Brazil is bankrupt, totally bankrupt, but it's an oligarchical state, in which you have a small part of the population is wealthy and powerful, and is able to control things; and the larger part of the population, which hates the smaller part of the population, living in other areas, in a state of constant conflict. It is not a stable nation -- you wouldn't call it a democratic nation by any chance. It's a dictatorship. And it has certain wealth and certain power in it.

But! It has a financial system which is a swindle, and the financial system is this Inter-Alpha Group, based operationally in London, the chief vehicle of the British Empire. Among its other crimes, as I'll explain a little later, it controls much of the Russian government, today. Now, with Western Europe absolutely in a hopeless situation, under the present regime, and with Russia largely controlled, to a large degree by the British, who control much of Russia's policy and destiny, under British direction, for reasons I shall explain, we are almost isolated, the United States, isolated by having a President like this, and isolated by the fact that Europe, continental Europe no longer functions; it can be brought back to function, as a collection of sovereign nation-states, but now it is not a collection of sovereign nation-states! It is a collection of non-sovereign nation-states! These nations do not have the power, to define their own system of credit! They are captives of the British Empire! Captives of the same empire that runs Brazil. And Brazil represents a gambling center, in world currencies, which is bankrupt, and ready to blow!

If any part of this system blows, and it can blow at any time, the entire, present world monetary-financial system will not collapse, it will disintegrate! -- in a fashion much like the great dark age of Europe's 14th century. So therefore, time is running out. The issue is not a difference of opinion on policy. The issue is a choice of policy, between one under which we can survive, and one under which we're doomed! And time is running out! Hence, the Ides of March.

The President of the United States, the current one is nothing but a fly, a fly floating on somebody's soup. He's of no importance in himself. He's nasty, like a fly in the soup, is nasty. But he is not the problem in and of himself. He's the problem in the fact that he's there; that he's not fit to be President. That he's controlled by foreign influences which are our enemy. He does not have the intellect, or morals, to stop doing what he's doing. Therefore, his presence in the White House is destroying the United States! Not because he has any clear intention -- he doesn't have a clear intention! The man is a mental case. But if we don't get him out of office, soon, we're not going to have a United States! And that, of course, is my view, the greatest reason, not to have him in that office: His very presence, in the White House, is a threat to existence of the United States! We can probably find some mental hospital, someplace in the world, where he can be kept safely, or something like that. Or maybe his mental illness is the cured. But he must go! That's why, he must be impeached!

We won't actually impeach him: We'll get to the point, where he has to be impeached. And then, one ominous day, some gentlemen, known or unknown to you, will be walking down a corridor, on their way to have a meeting with a certain figure of the United States. And when that meeting is ended... he's going to walk, like Richard Nixon. We're not going to wait for 2012. We're not going to wait for later in 2010. We're not going to wait beyond spring. We're now in the time, he must go. Because, if he does not go, the United States will disintegrate, and that is the best of all reasons, for impeaching a President.

And the way you impeach a President, is not by a vote. You impeach a President by a mass action: A mood throughout the population, as the majority of our citizens today, "He must go!" And when the people, with just reason, think that this President "must go!", he must go! And the way that's done, people who take the role of Erinyes, the dark angels of ancient Greece, the dark women, who come swarming down from the skies, to take the reprobate away, will move. And that is exactly what is about to happen. It must happen.

Kesha Rogers Speaks at the LaRouchePAC International Webcast

Good afternoon. So, we waged a hard-fought campaign in Texas, and we didn't just say we must save NASA and impeach Obama, but we said that we're waging a war for the future of humanity. And if you want a future for your children, then you are going to stand with my campaign to call for the impeachment of Obama. And we did that very loudly and very clearly, and on March 2, the population and the voters of the 22nd District responded overwhelmingly. And this response came from an organizing of the mass strike in the population that said, we want to put an end to the bailouts; we want a future for our children; we want a future for our nation. And as you saw from the response in the vote from the 22nd Congressional District, they didn't just respond to a slogan that said, "Oh, that's cool. Save NASA; impeach Obama. I like that." But people said, as we continued to go to their doors, as we continued to say to them, "Right now, this nation is in a dire crisis." They said, they look at their children as they were tucking them in to sleep at night, they thought about what we presented to them, and the challenge for their future, the challenge for the nation that we presented to them, and they said, "I have to do something. I have to go out and fight." And that's what happened. People got out; people fought. And now, as the campaign continues, we're going to continue to develop that leadership, to promote the leadership which is necessary in the population to get people to recognize that right now, the new challenge that is being put on us, the new challenge that is being put forth to the population is that they have to determine what type of future that they're going to give to their children, to their grandchildren.

And so, we have a new phase of the campaign as we continue to go on, and the new phase of the campaign is what Mr. LaRouche has put on the ground, has put out very prominently, as the mission orientation for a Moon-Mars mission, and now this campaign, as my friend Sky Shields has very clearly put out, and Mr. LaRouche in his new paper has put forth, this campaign has opened up a new phase of leadership in saying that we're now going to move on to development of a rebirth of a Moon-Mars colonization and mission orientation for the country. And so, I ask that each of you continue to join with me, as we fight in this campaign to provide the leadership, along with my campaign, and also the campaigns of other two representatives, Rachel, Congressional candidates Rachel Brown and Summer Shields. Thank you very much.
