Subject: Re: Sunday Times news story on Ghislaine Maxwell federal indictment

I spoke to him off-the-record (and made sure he knew what that means, that's been an issue with some of our UK counterparts), he seemed reasonable and It looks like he won't go with the story, at least for now.

Hi [REDACTED] — if you haven't yet spoken with this person, do you have a quick minute to discuss? I just wanted to make clear that we have not in any way made public the identity of Victim 3, so I'm not sure what the ethical basis would be for any reporter to claim to know who this person is. Thanks.

Subject: Sunday Times news story on Ghislaine Maxwell federal indictment

Dear [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]

Sorry to contact you out of the blue, but I've been working on the Ghislaine Maxwell sex trafficking charges story for The Sunday Times newspaper in London over the past few weeks. The federal indictment highlights three specific victims, identified as Minor Victim 1, 2 and 3.

I believe that "Minor Victim 3" is a British-born woman called [REDACTED] and plan to state this in a news story on Sunday. She previously waived her right of anonymity at a court hearing attended by victims of Jeffrey Epstein in New York last August and subsequently appeared on the NBC Dateline show. Can you or one of your colleagues please urgently let me know if there are any legal issues that would prevent me from naming Ms [REDACTED] as a key witness in this case? Do prosecutors plan to publicly identify Ms Maxwell's victims at any point? If so, when? I can be contacted via email or on [REDACTED]. My deadline is 10pm GMT today. Many thanks for your time and help.

Best wishes
